

Legacy Commission

EMILY ZIMMERN, CHAIR

Legacy Commission Charge

- ◀ Engage in a comprehensive study of street names and monuments in the City of Charlotte that honor a legacy of Confederate soldiers, slave owners and segregationists.
- ◀ The community engagement process will inform the final determination of any recommended changes presented by the Commission.
- ◀ All street name changes and monument name changes will begin a new history that is inclusive of contributions made by our country's most worthy citizens.

Legacy Commission Review Process

◀ Historical Background

- Understanding the Lost Cause and Charlotte's Role in Perpetuating Its Myths
- Slavery, the Civil War, and the Rise of White Supremacy in Charlotte, NC

Monuments

- ◀ It was determined that there are no Confederate monuments currently in public spaces controlled by the City of Charlotte, beyond those located in Elmwood Cemetery.
- ◀ Commissions in other cities and scholars who have written about the topic have largely agreed that cemeteries, along with battlefields, are appropriate locations for Confederate monuments.

Legacy Commission Review Process

- ◀ Deliberations on Current Street Names
 - Approaches taken by other cities: Atlanta, Dallas, Louisville, and Richmond
 - Establishing Criteria for Street Name Changes
 - Community Engagement is Critical and Necessary Before any Street Name Changes
- ◀ A New Commemorative Landscape
 - Revised Criteria for Street Names in the Future

Current Policy for Street Name Changes

- ◀ Citizens may request that the names of streets within the Charlotte City Limits be changed.
- ◀ A petition of 75% of the property owners on the street will be required for non-agency/departmental requests.
- ◀ Property owners are responsible for all costs associated with street-name changes.
